SEVERALL TREATISES CON-

CERNING THE TRVCE AT THIS PRESENT propounded.

The first, laying open divers Considerations and Reasons, why a Truce ought not to bee Contracted: Propounded vnto the High and Mightie Lords the States Generall of the Vnited Provinces: By the right Honble the Commissioners and Deputies of the most Hon: authorized Company of West India. In their owne behalfe.

The second, discusseth this question very pithily and at large, whether or no it bee lawfull to make Truce with the King of Spaine, with divers fixing Considerations.

Lastly, here is added a Remonstrance, represented to the States theyr Excellencies, In the behalfe of the King of Bohemia, which hath a respect vnto the Affaires in Germanie.

All truly and faithfully Translated out of the Low Dutch Copie.

Three severall Treatises concerning the Truce at this present propounded.

High and Mightie Lords.

Lthough wee affure our selves and are confident, that your Excellencies and Lordships both according to your wonted wisedome can, and according to your speciall benevolence and favour towards vs, will take into Confideration; that an especiall duty doth vs all generally bind, both to the conservation and increasing of our Company, and to the safetie and welfare of our welbeloued Countrey. Yet neverthelesse, wee cannot but esteeme our selves particularly obliged, to shew to your Excellencies in all submissive manner briefly, the chiefest matters which in this particular are to bee considered of.

First, ought to bee taken into consideration, with what desire and expectation, the erecting of this Company hath both by all good Patriots amongst our selves as also by all welwilling Neighbours and others without our State, been earnestly looked and hoped for. And how at last notwithstanding much opposed, with the Contradictions and gainstanding of some, the same though slowly is brought to good effect.

Secorda-

Secondly, that your Excellencies out of your owner voluntary motions, have freely afforded and a sinfance to your Subjects. And by forme of mutuall contract, and reciprocall engagement, have promifed in case of Warre to yeeld them all helpe and furtherance and by Contract with forraigne Nations, to maintaine them in their Corporation.

Thirdly, that hereupon, the Capitall of this Company, by the inducements of the Directors thereunto appointed by your Excellencies, hat heene wholly furnished and made compleat, even by such as your Excellencies your selves may judge and perceive to stand, for the maintainance of the true reformed Religion, of Liberties of our own Country. In somuch, that divers even from a poore stocke, have largely Contributed.

Fourthly, that by reason of this Company, from the first beginning, divers ships have both beene built, and bought, and divers imployed, which otherwise had laine still out of Service, for want of Commerce, Trafique, and employment.

Fifthly, that by this Company, many and great Ships have beene built, to the manifest and apparent encrease, of the Nauie and Nauigation. And especially, many faire and swift Pinaces.

Sixthly, that the number of our Ships hath from time to time so encreased, that for the present wee can make aboue an hundresh sayle of very faire well rigged ships, (3)

Ships, fit for warlike employment, beeing of severall biguesse, and now at Sea, ready for service.

Seauenthly, that well ane entertained upon the same Ships a great number both of Marriners and soulders continually; so that the precedent yeare, we employed in our service about nine thousandmen, and now at this present doe employ neare upon fifteene thousand. Now by this meanes our men are wonder-fully trained up to Nauigation.

By this meanes are made divers expert Pilots, and a great number so well exercised, that our Country may now continually find some fit and able men, both to serve for Master and other inferiour offices in their.

Navie.

Eighthly, that we have victualed the same ships, some for twelve, some fifteene, some for eighteene, and some for more Moneths.

Ninthly, that we have so furnished our ships with great shot, that the last years wee had in our Nauie 264. brasse Peeces, among the which were many Demiculuerins, and neare upon 1400. great Falcons, which number the syears is palpably increased so that now, wee have above four bundred brasse Peeces, and above 2000. Falcons, besides 600. Peeces for slone shot.

Lastly, that we have provided and furnished the same Nauie, with a great quantitie of Powder, which was most made heere. So that this last yeare, wee have bestowed upon our Nauy, above an hundred theuthousand pounds of Gunpowder. Out of all which premises doth plainely appeare, what traffique and trading our Equipage hath caused amongst us how many men we have imployed: With what admirable forces we have enriched your Excellencies Nauy. Whereby great helpe and furtherance is administred to your Excellencies in time of need and danger. As experience hath taught of late (without pride be it spoken) when our Company stood this Country in great stead, in their late Broyles and Inconveniencies.

And now flands farther to bee considered: What riches and treasure their Ships have brought into these Countries.

First passing by and omitting, whatsoever hath come in former yeares, as Gold, Elephants teeth, Greines, Hides, Skins, Wood, Salt, and the like; (by way of Commerce and Traffiq e) the Silver, Coined and Vicoined, which hath beene obtained, by overcomming the Fleet of Nova Hispania, doth amount to such an infinite treasure, that never the like Prize hath beene brought in, eyther here, or elsewhere.

Secondly, wee have these late ensuing yeares deprived our Enemies, and enriched our owne Country, with a great deale of Indigo. Insomuch, that towards the latter end of the latt, and beginning of this yeare, about four thousand Cases haue beene brought in.

Thirdly, a very great quantitie of Sugar; infomuch that this present years onely hath beene brought in by vs, some three thousand Chests.

FourthFourthly, a wonderfull great number of raw Hides; especially this yeere, aboue fixe and thirtie thousands wrested from the Enemie.

Fifthly, such a worthy deale of Cochineel, as neuer came in these Countries before.

Sixthly an vn/peakable deale of Tobacco, which now is become great Merchandize.

Lastly, great inches and treasure in all manner of costly lapidarie silke, silke Wares, Mark, Amber, all kind of Drugs, Brasil Wood, Camperie Wood, and other wares, (which were tedious to relate) so that wee have alreadie brought into these Countries many millions. All the which Wares, are bought and dispearsed amongst the Inhabitants here; some vsed, others transported, and howsoever thereby are your Excellencies Subjects enriched, the decayed trassique increased, and the Convoy strengthened.

It may soone bee perceived what losse our enemies have hereby sustained. Moreover wee have surprised many Galleons from the King of Spaine, which formerly were esteemed as invincible Vessels; besides many other Warlike ships; passing over with silence, above two hundreth ships as also Barques. Which we have afforced to our silves, appropriated to our owne vse, & in part destroyed.

The same our Ships have overmastred the rich and neightie Citie St. Salvador in Braull; and possessed for a while, ransacked Portorico, and explained the way, to command the most enclosed Hauens, and have destroyed and demolished the Ca-file of Saint Margarita.

By which manner of doing, wee have not onely impouerished the King of Spaine, and emptyed his Cash, but also expated him to excessive expences.

Wee say, wasted his banckes or Cash.

First, withdrawing from him so much silver, as so much bloud out of a veine.

Secondly, in diminishing his Custome and poundage, as well in Portugall as Spaine. But hither-to, especially in Portugall; because, there at the E-gresse and returne, thirtie per Cento are to be paid.

Thirdly, also in respect of the forenamed poundage, for want of returne thence, his Subiects are disanimated and discouraged, either to ship goods, or send ships, so that the Commerce and Trafique of Portugall and Spaine dayly decreaseth, and their Sugar remaines upon their hands in extream quantitie. In Brasill for want of ships, and feare of our Nauie, so driven to great charges.

Fourthly, because we doe hinder the transposition of Blackmoores, from the which he doth not only receive great Custome, but also by them all things are furthered, and so he is put to more expences.

First, because hee must fortifie and secure his Nauy, for whereas he durst permit his Treasure to passe with 6.7. or 8. Galleons, hee is compelled to procure thrice as many, and yet dare hardly proceed for feare of our Ships.

Secondly, because he was driven to surprize and regaine the Citie of Salvador, with a Nauy of 60 sayle of Ships, in the which were fifteene thousand men; Which enterprize, although to small successe, cost

bim according to the computation of all discreet Indgements, a hundreth and fiftie tun of treasure: and yet was so frustrated; that he got an emptie place, instead of a Mountaine, a Mouse.

Thirdly, because he is forced to entertaine Fortisications upon all his Coasts and Hauens (for he knowes not where to expect v's ) his Garisons increase continually, and he sends amunition continually, and in lieu he did receive now he debur seth money, where it commeth to passe, that his revenewes waxe small. And by the way might so be opposed that he should have but a small remainder of the same. And this also might come to passe, that we might hinder their Spanish Nawie of Terra firma, Hondacus, and Noua Hispania, From arriving in their due and appointed time, and from wintering in their desired ports (as lately hath beene experienced by our Fleet, under the command of the Admirall Adriaem lanfs. Pater) to their vnexpresible expences and dangerous passage, in an unaccustomed season, so that his enterprize may be altogether frustrated.

Out of all which appeares, that the Kings Chefts are emptie, that his credit failes, and all his adhærents are forced to breake, and stoopedow, his Mariners here are vnsatisfied; insomuch, that every one that lookes with an indifferent eye, may perceive that this our East India Companie hath afforded the King of Spaine an irreparable opposition and damage, and is like to make this breach greater, if her proceedings be but continued, and scalonably seconded.

Vato which premisses serve these subsequent occasions which never yet were incident, nor ever are like to be; to wit, that divers of his Countries of greatest importance are fore divided. For the division is among the Spaniards themselves, and there is no small jealousse among the Negroes and overmastered Barbarians. Vato which inconveniences, he cannot administer a remedie, by reason of the want of money, yet he wants the benevolence of all men there. Which impe of occasion we can wait on, and beat him at his owne weapons.

We have now also by our owne losse, and at our owne cost learned this slight, to touch him boldest where hee is weakest. If now the current of this our streams should bee stopped, hee will recourt his strength, and restore all things to a new forme vnknowne to vs.

Wee will not expect now that your Excellen: will hereafter, eyther flight or forget the service of our Company performed for our Countryes. For otherwile as we have declared and propounded to. your Excel: the benefit and commodity. Which this Country hath enjoyed by the proceeding and good successe of our Companie: so could we likewife make knowne vnto your Excellen: diuers moft euident dammages and losses which wee are like to suffaine, and consequently would ensue, if the knot of this vnited Companie should once bee vntyed. For as the benefit of this worke hath beene great in the successe, which worke we have brought to perfection with excelling charges, with great hazard and danger; so all the world may soone perceiue, and all men doc alreadie foresee, that if the Arength fireign and power of this company should be restrained by the dissoluting of the same, there would incuitably sollow the discontrarie, vnto whatseener wee have deducted for the prosperitie of these Countries.

As first. Wee shall not bee able to employ our ships, and therefore be constrained to sell and put off many of them, may the most part at small under rates: build no more, hyre no more but whereas now and than, some false knaue or other, doth secretly conuey some ship furniture, amunition, or ship unto the Enemy, we should see our best ships fittest for War, and Nauigation, transported that her before every mans eyes, without feare or parting backe.

Secondly, Wee should not bee able to yeeld service and employment to our Mariners, which would cause them to flye to the Enemy, and tender him their

Thirdly, it is to be feared that the same our seamen having tasted the sweetnesse of our bostie and Prizes would betake themselves to Pyrates, and so overthrow the safety of our Nauigation.

Fourthly, that (as in the former Truce) men will study and endeauour to saile with lesse charges, and so omit shot and amunition, or at leastwife take that which s but slight and of no value, and so in time of need and common danger, we shall bee to seeke, and sound unprovided.

A so, wee shal not procure such abundance of costing wares into our Countries, or at least wise not so cheape and at so small charges, considering that all must passe vinder the heavie burden of our ens-

mies Toll and Custome, so that the Creame wil be skimmed off before the milke come to our hands, whence must of necessitie ensue a decrease in Trading, and all manner of Trafique.

Contrariwise, the K. of Spaine shall by this meanes obtains and recouer his Gold & Silver springs and veynes at liberty, get forward againe, waxe firong, redresse and rectifie the great dilorder in yonder parts. Reedifie his decayed Forcresses, build new, in stead that now he findes them laid open. He will also then eyther allure the Sauages to himselfe, or otherwise extirpate them, who now doe much in. cline to vs. In a word, he will seeftablish all things there, that it will bee in vaine for vs to endeauour that way in future time.

That all this is truth, wee shall need no other witnesses to testifie, then common voyces, for the most part euen of those that are afarre off, or of your Excellencies subiects, who doe vnanimously acknowledge that they have ever been of that opinion, that nothing can be enterprized more prejudicial to our common Enemy, then to affault him in those parts, whence he doth obtaine with what hee doth curbe all Christendome, and whereby he hath now many yeares aspired to the valuersall Monarchy. And that therefore according to the beginnings, they doe perceiue themselues not deceiued in their opinion and judgement. Wee doe appeale to our Enemy himselfe, who cannot Conceale that there is nothing present them so fore, nor vigeth more to defire a Truce then the weapons of our Company and that if this Thorne were but out of their foot, they

they will then give vs what soeuer advantage.

Infomuch then, the Intrest of a common harme is greater then that of particular copartners, who (as they say concerning the most part) have adventured their monies more for love, then greedinesse of gaine, they could easily endure that losse which should befall them by the dissolution of the Company, if thereby the common good and publicke weale were furthered. Because by this meanes the party will recover his strength, take breath, get new blood and vigour, and to the contrary these Countries will decay and faint, and straine one of their best points, and (if we might be so bold to say) lame an arme.

Also it might come to passe, that this businesse might be undertaken by some other, and wee stand and be spectators onely, and so never come to bee our selves againe in this matter. The most we might expect should bee a Competencie, and Dependancie on others.

In Conclusion then, Wee doe most submissionely request and intreat, that your Excel: (according to your wonted wisedome) would bee pleased to prevent these forenamed Inconveniencies and losses: and not suffer our Companie (as we have dedúcted before) to be ruinated by a Truce, and the Spaniard to take breath and gather strength. But rather that it would please your Excellen: to maintayne our Company in their former right, & incourage, and strengthen them in their good purpose and resolution, and to suffer them to inioy & seape the fruits of so many dangers, hazards, paines and troubles as their Capitals and Services have vndergone and sustained, and the good respect which they have deferued from this State. Not shuffing and putting fro vs, that great blessing which the Lord hath begun to bestow upon their Countries, by the meanes of this Company.

And so wee trust that the same blessing will continue amongst vs, to the propagation of his name, and honour and inlighting of our owne Countrey. Vnto the which, according to our meane indeauours we are and will be still willing to Contribute. And will alwayes bee ready to declare surther reasons of this our backwardnesse to your Excellencies, and will euer remaine, &c.

Your Excellencies, most humble Servants.

Divers Conscionable Considerations vpon this Question:

Whether in Conscience men may contract a Truce with the King of Spaine.

Efore any thing bee undertaken, it is necessary, that in the first place this question be made, Whether or no it be agreeable to Gods most holy will, & may be performed with a safe conscience.

The Prince of Orenge, of bleffed and happy memory. When as there was to bee treated at Bourborgh in Flanders, concerning a Peace with the King of Spaine, aswell in the behalfe of the the Queene of England, as on the behalfe of these Countries, did then chiefly pause vponthis point, and to this end called together an Assembly or Synode of Clergie men, to consult of that matter. It were very requifire that our high and mighty Superiours followed the same steps, and in this Treaty of Truce, did consult with the Ministers of God, and so take Counsell from his owne Word. But notwithstanding this is vnlikely at thistime, yet will not shele few confiderations proue unnecessary and unprofitable, euen to the fatistying and informing the consciences of those who shal hereafter read and peruse them. My desire therefore is, that they may bee considared and thought upon, with unfaigned loue towards God, in his feare, and for his Truths fake. The

The Question here is not, Whether or no wee may with a safe Conscience make war against the King of Spaine, and while he continues war, proceed and continue ours against him. Wee hold this affirmative, and lay it as a ground of truth: For we know that true Maxime received of all true Christians, and the higher Powers of these Countries, and indeed is grounded vpon the facred Scriptures, That the Magistrates doe not beare the Sword in vaine; but for the suppressing and punishing of the bad, and for the defence of the good; for the good of their Subjects; and consequently, not only against private offenders, who have damaged and wronged this and that particular person, but also against generall and Publicke offenders, who labour to disturbe and ouerthrow the state of the Land, and the Publickeweale: But the Question is this, Whether or no we may cease making warre; or (to be plainer) Whether wee may for a time, or for certaine yeeres, shur wp and stop our proceedings in warre.

This Question being thus propounded in gene-'rall in the Thesis or Position, it vasolds it selfe: For who dares doubt but wee may ceafe warring with mutual agreement, when the contrary party either requireth, or is willing to doe the same? Therefore the Question propounded in the Thefis is without difficulty, except it be among such as either are blood-thirsty, or reuengefull, or intend either to enrich or advance themselves by the booty and prey; such I meane, as would not deale in this matter according to conscience, but their owne beaftly and fleshly lusts.

Here lyes the point in the Hypothesis, or conditionall Proposition: that is, when this Question is applyed to our common Enemy, and his state and condition; whether then it may consist with safety of Conscience to contract a Truce with the King of Sptine.

And here two things offer themselues to bee considered:

First, the Condition of the King of Spaine.

Secondly, our state and present condition, and occasions.

For the first, it is certaine, and beyond doubt, that the King of Spaine, our enemy, doth not now enter into Treatic with vs concerning a Truce, either out of love to peace, or love to our persons.

This is manifest and evident in the proceedings of all his warres from time to time, also in his warres continued against vs. It doth appeare that he aymes onely to erech his supposed and imagined vniuersall Monarchie, and absolute Dominion. Remember the warres, whereby he did help the Emperour, for the suppressing and subduing of those that were vnited with vs in religion and loue, euen while he entertained a Truce with vs. Confider the wars which he even now vndergoeth in Italy against the French King, & other parts of the world; and will treate with vs, not concerning Peace, but a Truce. He effeemes vs his Rebels, he hates vs as such, wherefore he would neuer acknowledge vs for free Countries, nor neuer will as long as the World stands. He onely difsembles, and conceales his malice for a while, against a better and fitter opportunity. How hee hath hath continued in his hatred and malice against vs, hath sufficiently beene manifested since our Truce with him hath been expired. What moves him then, and induceth him to this? Nothing but his loue to his owne State, and presupposed and imaginary univerfall Monarchy. For feeing that it is impossible for him to attaine to that height, through his warres against vs, and that God affords vs in our proceedings of Warre, sufficient meanes, ro confirme our State, and debilitate his; hee labours by his Truce to wrest the meanes our of our hands, and so to fortifie and confirme his State against ours, to the end that hee may with more ease and profitable successe, to the increase of our losse, recollect himselfe, and make his war the stronger.

If any one oppose thus; How-euer things are, yet in the time of Truce wee shall possesse and enioy rest and tranquility, without Warre and combustion; then ought this to bee considered of:

Whether or no this can vindoubtedly bee affirmed. For if wee can bee affured of rest and peace, what neede so many Souldiers bee kept in service, laid in Garrison vpon all the Frontiers? Why doe wee not saue these Charges, and decrease our cost? Hence appeares then, that wee cannot bee secure, and certaine of the sidelity of our Enemy, or of any rest and peace, even in time of the Truce.

This must needes be so; for we deale with an Enemie, who neither stands to his word nor pro-

mile, although confirmed with his owne hand,

seale, and Oath.

Those Maximes of your Popish Counsels, that no faith is to bee kept with Heretickes, is knowne throughout the whole World, and the practise of the same is made manifest in all Countries. These Netherlands have by wofull experience tryed and tasted of Spanish insidelity: doe but reade those passages that are past, turne over our Histories, and they will abundantly testifie the same.

Shall wee say that the Spaniard is by former experience better taught, and is now of another mind and condition? Who shall affure vs of this? It cannot so soone bee said, but may as soone bee denyed. And the Negatiue is more probable then the Affirmative. For this you must grant, that hee is still bound in conscience to the Pope of Rome; and you know that he ascribes to himselfe this authority, that hee can and will free the consciences of men, from their obligation by Oath, that hee can discharge Subiects from their Oath of Allegiance, made to their Prince and Superiours; that hee hath power to stirre vp and incense Subiects against their Kings and Magistrates, to depose Kings, &c.

When now the Pope shall see this to further and prooue beneficiall to the Church of Rome, will hee not farre rather have the power to free the King of Spaine from his promise made eyther by subscription or Oath, to such which he holds for Hercticks and rebellious Subjects:

Nay,

Nay, will he not rather ordaine that for the good & benefit of the Church of Rome, the King of Spaine doe vnawares and suddenly intercept, and fall avpon them. Shall we say, this can be prevented, by entertaining and keeping our Weapons, guarding our frontiers, and being vigilant that they doe not suddenly fall on vs, and so keepe him from his enterprize, and be out of danger? What then will the Truce signifie? which we shall be faine to entertaine in lieu of a defensive warre? and in the meane while barring our sclues from all opportunity of aduantaging our sclues against our enemie?

Concerning the second point, namely our state and present occasion: The Lords the States of these Countries doe professe to maintaine the true reformed Christian Religion; Thus they declare in their ordaining of their Fasts, they shew in their Demonstrations to Kings, Princes, and States, they publish the same in their Proclamations and Ordinanees, and they doe well; fo that one of the chiefest Maximes of our State, is the managing of the true Christian Religion. Now let vs examine whether the Truce is intended to that end; 'tis certaine that the Spaniard doth hate vs for nothing more, and for no other cause but this Religion; he also vieth the same for a pretense to instifie his warres against vs. and to declare and shew that we have forfeited our Priviledges.

He perceiues now, that he cannot attaine unto all this by open Warre, he therefore labours to bring it to passe by the Truce. And in very deed hee can use no better meanes: For he knowes how many Sectaries here are amongst us, all enemies to the same Religion, how many inhabitants in these countries yet cleaue and adhere to Popery; how the Priests and lesuites swarme here, ayming and endevouring to incense the hearts of the Subjects against our State and Religion: nay more, euen to seduce and envelop the very hearts of the Magistrates and Gouernours. Consider againe, that two forts of people chiefly doe bend and oppose themselves against our State and Religion; the Papists, and Remonstrants; the Papists pleading and holding, that the Sate of these Countries is an vsurped State, and that the King of Spaine is lawfull Heyre of these Countries. The Remonstrants, because their designe and purpose is dismissed, and their Faction repressed, euen out of a bitter hatred and malice against the Religion and government of these Countries, expressing themselves most vilely and violently, yea many times vttering these and the like speeches, That they doe acknowledge the King of Spaine to be the natural Lord of these Countries. Now he knowes how the other Secaries doe vphold and animate these two sorts of people, and that consequently the true Religion hath as many internall as externall enemies. And that these youthes are now compelled to be still, or at least cannot so well and couenietly lift vp their heads in time of war as they would doe in time of truce. Experience hath sufficiently taught in the former Truce, how they did endeauour and striue to suppresse the Religion amongst vs, what power and subtilty thereunto hath beene vsed, how those factious people and enemies of true Religion, did all at once elevate and bestirre themselues, to worke out their malice and harred against against the Religion. And had not the Lord himselse wonderfully prouided for vs, in what wosull cstate had we found our selves? Hence it comes to passe that those that were vnited vnto vs in the same Religion, were in the former Truce thus miserably and earnestly persecuted in Germany, and wofully subdued. This is an vndoubted truth, if our Religion be lost, our Countries are lost: now, how neere it was come to this point with our Religion, in the former Truce, cannot but be palpable, to him who is either of understanding or judgement.

Who doubts, but this proffer of Truce tends to the same scope? Now that the Spaniard hates the Religion, and therfore imployes all meanes, and directs all his actions to extirpate the same, is without and beyond dispute. That all Sectaries within these Countries hate Religion, and do but wait for an opportunity to expell the same, needs no proofe. The Spaniard he propounds a Truce, all the Papists amongst vs, all Sectaries, Remonstrants, Bastad-Lutherians, Anabaptifts, people without any religion, and fuch we call Libertines, commend it, call for it, are ready to embrace it. Now confider whether this Truce can possibly serue for the managing, maintenance and defence of the fore-named true Religion. The Spaniard expects and hopes that the Sectaries will lift up their heads, and take an opportunity to suppresse this Region. The Secaries they long and desire to obtaine such an opportunity : especially that knowne and noted Faction, who doe trauell, as it were, in labour, with a bitter hatred, till they can by such an oportunity revenge themselves. This it is that causeth all faithfull Patriots, and true louers louers of the fore-named Religion, to bee sensible of the danger, & to apprehed of this Truce so grieuously.

Now let it be duely pondered in the feare of Goo, whether it may confist with a safe conscience, to endanger the Countries, to be deceived, and suddenly and vnexpectedly to be surprized of our enemy; to give into the hands of our enemies, those meanes which they themselves deeme and judge to serue for the restauration of their State, and weakning of ours. To yeeld an opportunity to our externall and internall enemies, which they defire and long for, even to the end they may suppresse the true Religion: To forfake and abandon those that are united with us in the true Religion, in Germany and else-where, and cast off fuch meanes-as God hath yeelded unto vs for their restitution: To grieue our Friends, ioy and animate our enemies, and all this at fuch a time, when God doth palpably bleffe vs, doth establish our State, and confound our enemies; and so vngratefully reied Gods mercies and bleffings, and trample them vnder our feet. Thele considerations ought we to take to heart, for no reasons with any ground can prevaile against them, vnlesse we could afore-hand be affured, that the Truce is required, with love to the welfare of these Countries, and that the Spaniard will firmly keep his word : And that by Generall Councell, with confent and approbation of the Pope, that Decree shall be reuoked, That no faith is to be kept with Heretickes; and valesse he doe resigne the power of dispensing with Oathes. That also the Sectaries shall bee quiet and still, without turbulency, or endeuouring to suppresse Religion; and that all Gouernours, aswell in generall as particular, shall vnanimously, with all diligence ligence and integrity, labour and striue to maintaine and further the reformed Religion. For as long as we have not this assurance, the former considerations re-maine in full force.

If question be made, what assurance we have against this in time of warre, the answer is at hand. Experience (we know) teacheth vs, that those Armes, which through Gods blessing we beare against our enemies, as it is confest, in time of Truce we must still beare for fatther assurance: and whereas by reason of war we are as it were vnited and ioyned together, so that we shall not, like vnto loose brooms, fall asunder: whence will come to passe; that those that are enemies to Religion, shall not have opportunity to put in practice their malicious enterprizes.

The principall thing that can heere be obiected in case of conscience, is, that war is a cruell beaft, and this beast will rest at least-wise in time of Truce. But in this case consider, how much the more furious and cruell the will be, after the shall be rouzed out of her fleepe, and how this hath bin already experienced by those grand Armies which the Ehemy did produce after the last Truce, as also his power at Sea. This is a lamentable thing, and a matter of conscience, when fo much blood is spilt: But what will it be, when the Enemy, by reason of the Truce, shall, having recoucred his strength, deuoure vs and our children, according to his tyranous and bloody nature, and cruell difposition? Shall we then thinke no humane blood bee spile? And to what end I pray' tends the Truce, but to this deligne: When the interpall enemies of the Countries, vnto true Religion, shall oppose themselves against the defenders and professor true Religion. ligion, and then these suppose themselves to have suft cause to desend them, shall within our selves fall together by the eares? Will not this be a wofull speciacle for vs, and pleasing vnto them our enemies? Oh how neere was it come to this push by the former Truce and had prevailed, if God had not wonderfully provided. Was it not come to the very height of this spectacle.

But who are those that speake in this wise? are they not Papists, whose qualities we cannot be vnacquainted with? who, as long as the Armes in these Countries take good successe, they make a faire shew of being on our side; but as soone as ever the case doth alter, they cannot conceale their villanous malice. Did it not lately appeare, when the enemy was in the Velewe, and when Amersfort was loft?

Are they not Remonstrants, whose partiall mindes and intentions doe manifest themselves in all their speeches, writings, and actions? Are they not other Sectaries, who all alike are linked together, to sub-wert the true Religion, the safety and glory of our State? Notwithstanding they make a faire shew of Peace, and sparing of humane blood, 'tis to spare the Enemy, and savour them, and to suppresse the true Patriots of the Countreys. This is Sauls mercie to Agag the King of the Amalechites, who in the mean while vsed all diligence to destroy the vpright King Danid. Achab the King or Israel savoured Benhadad the King of Syria, when he beeing in the vtmost extremity, trusted to this, that the Kings of Israel were mercifull Kings.

Such mercy did the Kings of Ifrael shew vnto the Idolatrous Kings, enemics vnto Ifrael, and notwith-D<sub>2</sub> Randing standing they for their parts, cruelly persecuted the Prophets of the Lord, because they did not speake pleasing to their palates. This is the quality of all Hypocrites, and enemies of true Religion; they cry all for mercie, when as wee have to doe with Idolaters, and enemies of God and his Church: But when they have to doe with the faithfull servants of God, protectors of his true Religion, then they have abandoned and cast offall mercie. Lay downe therefore this sinister mercie, lest that punishment which was threatned and befell the mercifull Kings of Ifrael, befall you also. Shew your mercy to the Israel of God, who are persecuted by the Idolater and falseworshippers: Looke vpon God, and the instice of our Cause: Labour to further Gods Honour, and to defend the true Religion, to protect our owne Countrie against our Common sworne Enemy. Dee this in holy zeale, in Gods feare, with a confident boldnesse and Courage; and the Lord of Hosts bee with you. Amen.

Remonstrance

Remonstrance

To be shewed and presented, in behalfe of the King of Bohemia, vnto the High and Mighty Lords, the Lords the States Generall of the Vnited Low-Countrie Provinces.

Concerning shis present Treatie of ceasing Armes, or

High and Mighty Lords:

Hereas it hath pleased Almighty God to giue so good a successe vnto the wars of the high & mighty Lords the States of the Vnited Provinces, aswell by Sea as by Land, so that the Enemy finding himselfe in great extremitie, is constrained to seeke after a Truce and ceasing of Armes, thereby to breathe himselse: His Maieflie of Bohemia, who also is partaker of this happines, and herein doth congratulate your Excellencies, cannot but (through and for the inseparable love, which from old time hath bin between His Maiesties House, and is yet maintained in this State, as also in respect of the common interest) earnestly intreate and request your Excellencies, that in case they should finde and deeme it necessary, profitable, and for the best of their Provinces, to affent ento a Treaty of Truce: That they would be pleased not to draw a conclusion, vnlesse the restitution of his Maiestie bee therein expressely set downe, agreed, and comprehended.

Confidering :

Considering, first, that these vnited Provinces cannot promise to themselves, much lesse expect any security, reft, or peace, as long as Germany, and especially the Palatinate, doe remaine under the suppression of the House of Austria, and Spaine: Considering that by how much more the forementioned House of Anstria shall hence-forward chance to elevate and establish her fortune and dignity, in the ruine, losse, and destruction of the most Illustrious Flouses and kindred of Germany; and about all, of the Prince Elector Palatine; by fo much the more, meanes and opportunitie will be yeelded unto them, for the joyning of the forces together of the whole body of the Empire, and for the bending of all their power against the State of these Countries, in all accidentall occasions whatsoeuer, being proffered and presented vnto them, without taking notice of any treaty or agreement. Wheras secondly, to the contrary, the forementioned house of Anstria and Spaine, with their adherents, (who hitherto, by their vniust and ouerchargeable proceedings, have firred against them the displeasure and ill will of all the Euangelicall Princes of the Empire)begin now to feare some cuill event, and fearfull alteration, disturbance, and subuersion in their affaires. which feare is much accrewed, through the evident and manifeR Victories of the high and mighty Lords the States generall of these Vnited Propinces.

Thirdly, this being very cuident and apparant, that the malice and hatred that the House of Austria and Spaine doe beare to the House of the Prince Elector Palatine, principally doth hence proceed, Because the same House hath ever beene well addicted and affectioned, and hath ever as much as in her lay, surthered and favoured the welfare, profit & increase of whatfoeuer did concerne the State of these Low-Countries. For which causes, the Emperour formerly hath shewed and declared vnto the King of Spaine, in his Letters, dated the 14 of Octob. 1621. (which Letters are now in the hands of his Maiesty of Bohemia, and are truely the very originall Letters) that this State of the Vnited Provinces can neuer be brought under the obedience and power of Spaine, as long as the House of the Elector Palatine is not wholly extirpated, and cut off from the Empire.

Fourthly, May it please your Excellencies, the high and mighty States generall, to be mindfull, that the Articles of the forbearance, which they contra-Sted with the King of Great Britaine, the 7 of Septemb. 1625. doe comprehend the Palatinate, and what soeuer concernes the same, confirmed with very powerfull and expresse words and termes against the House of Spaine and her adherents. His Maiestie considently reposing, that your Excellencies would carefully be mindfull of all this, and take into confideration the faithfull Seruices, which his Maiesties Predecesfors, as namely his Father and Grandfathers, haue done unto this State.

Fiftly, this also is to be held for a certaine, that if the Palatinate be wholly excluded in this Treaty of a Truce, which is now propounded and proffered vnto your Excellencies, this would inforce an irreparable losse and hinderance to the restitution of his Maiesty, and consequently to all the affaires of whole Germawhich have their relation and reflexe unto the vnired Provinces. But about all & in conclusion, herein is not only handled the particular of his MaieRy, but also the repairing, as also the liberty and maintenance of the reformed Churches, which at this day so heavily groane under the burden and yoake of smichrift; and the which doe inceffantly and feruently introat the Lord for the welfare and prosperity of these vnited Prouinces. Insomuch, that whatfoeuer your Excellencies shall doe in this particular, will serue much for the magnifying of Gods glory, and (which is the onely scope or marke to which all our actions ought to bee directed) to the refreshing and easing of many oppressed and distressed hearts; and hereby allure Gods blessing vpon your Countries, and gaine immortall praise to your Excellencies, and more and more increase the obliegement of His Maiestie and his Successors to your Excellencies. And your Excellencies may be affured, that His Maiestie and His, being restored to the Inheritance of their Fathers, shall ever bee carefull to tender your Excellencies all bounden dutie and service of sincere love, and everlasting acknowledgment, as often as time, meanes, and opportuni-
